THE FARTING FOOL. In many respects the people of the north are great—perhaps the greatest on earth. In everything they are propelled by a driving zeal and momentum that is irresistible. They are shifty and thrifty. They can squeez more juice out of a couple of oranges than the southern people can get out of half a dozen. They are methodical and calculating, industrious and enterprising. But their this word in a complimentary sense-often fanaticism is in strange contrast with the conservatism of the south. The superfluous vim which surcharges the Yankees-we use leads them into all sorts of inconsistency and tomfoolery. If one calls for soap and water, a gaping crowd is found ready to catch the bubbles. Everything new, novel, silly and absurd, sets the whole north agog. A walking match between two demireps will cause a whole community to perspire with enthusiasm and to go into eestacy over the long and graceful strides of the brazen bawds. All the vagaries and isms of the day have originated in the north. Prominent among these was Millerism, whose votaries trap doors in the roof of their houses and ascension robes ready to take their exit at a moment's warning. There is a strange inconsistency on the part of these fanalics. They have socie ties to prevent cruelty to animals, and will go into convulsions over an overloaded mule, a dog fight, or a slabsided borse enduring the agonies of a hungry maw. But they will look on with admiration, when a fool as fanatical as themselves undertakes the brutal and inhuman task of fasting forty days and forty nights. The sympathy which is lavished upon a bull pup or a sore-backed drayhorse, should be bestowed upon this Minneapolis donkey who has undertaken to consuffering he can inflict upon himself. This whole business is a digrace to our civilization. It has been demonstrated that hunger is the severest of all pains, and if Bergh was true to his mission he would arrest this lunaimposed torture. This experiment will prove nothing for the benefit of scifor it is already charged that has been privately conveyed to Dr. Tanner. A curious scientist once under took to teach his horse how to live without eating. The feat was accomplished, but just as the horse learned how to live without food he laid down and died. Dr. Tanner will probably share the same fate. The Tanner exhibition is as unprofitable to science as prize-fighting and should be discontinued. But the fanatics of the north are greatly excited over the experiment. It is bad enough to contemplate steamboat disasters and the sickening deaths caused by burning and railroad accidents, without being forced to read the self-imposed sufferings of a starving fool. If he succeeds he will demonstrate the fact that a man can live without food longer fact that a man can live without food longer than has been supposed, and what will be gained by the discovery? The notion that Dr. Tauner is going to teach shipwrecked sailors or miners confined under ground by an accident to prolong their lives by will power is sciolistic nonsense. Will power is of no use in starvation except to enable the subject to keep tion except to enable the subject to keep quiet and retard the consumption of vital policemen at edd times, are really of little or no value in a moral sense. Nobody needed substance by physical action. If Dr. Tanner to be informed that open prostitution abounds fasts forty days he will simply prove that a man—or at least one man—has superfluous animal tissue enough, if carefully husbanded by inaction, to subsist upon for that time was not known that there are about twelve by inaction, to subsist upon for that time without having it replenished by food. His loss of weight in that time will represent the exact amount of nutriment necessary to keep his physical machine going for forty days. It is said that the real interest in Dr. Tanner's experiment will not commence until he has fasted at least three weeks. There are plenty of well authenticated instances of people living without food as long as this, and stories with a little touch of the fabulous about them of abstinence for a longer period. In most of the recorded cases of long starvation the subject was either insane or a fraud. Occurse the stories of fasting saints in the middle ages are apt to be excluded from any variously into the social eviluational insurer into the social eviluation in the announcement that there are about twelve hundred harlots living in houses devoted to sexual commerce; nor is the exact figure of any consequence. The Weish fasting girl, Sarah Jacobs, whose achieve ments in 1869 made such a noise, was clearly a fraud. It was claimed that she had existed without food for twenty-six months; but when too trusting friends undertook to watch her closely and see that food was not smuggled to her, she immediately starved to death. An exchange paper before us briefly breaks the silence, and informs us that the "chaste white rose," Mrs. Elizabeth R. Theodore himself lives apart frem but supports his rife, and Mrs. Morse receives a support from her husband, from whom she lives separate. A TABOUED TOPIC

Brought Unpleasantly Near the Readers of Daily Journals through the Efforts of the Chicago Times-Facts and Figures in Regard to Prostitution

n the Garden City-The Nefarious Traffic Much Greater than the Exhibit Shown by the Census Marshals - Harlots in Respectable Circles -A Sad Picture,

Chicago Times, 9th: In a late issue of this journal appeared an article which gave a number of statistics in regard to the extent of prostitution in the city of Chicago. From these figures it is learned that the sum total of open prostitutes in Chicago is one thousand two hundred, and which is at the rate of about one to every sixty of the adult male population. Considering this sum total with reference to our entire population, it is at the rate of one of these women to each four hundred and twenty residents. Estimated with reference to our voting strength, there is one scarlet woman to about every fifty of the others. It is probably not far from the truth to place the ratio of this class to the ladult male element at about one to sixty or seventy. As stated in the article referred to, there is, in Londos, one prostitute to every sixty men; Chicago Times, 9th: In a late issue of this As stated in the article referred to, there is, in Londos, one prostitute to every sixty men; in Paris, one to fifteen, and in large cities, as a rule, one to fifty two. This would seem to make an excellent showing for Chicago; but, unfortunately, a closer analysis of the facts as to the condition of the Garden City will show a quite different state of things, and will warrant conclusions which are not so complimentary to our morality in this direction. In London there is no such thing as the system of what may be termed depots of prostitution, such as may be found in this country, and as is the case here in Chicago.

country, and as is the case here in Chicago.

In the English metropolis, the women who are engaged in this business do not occupy a house in common. Each, as a rule, has her own apartment; and the rame is true to own apartment; and the rame is true to a very great extent in Paris. Here we have a mixed form of domicile, in which a portion of this class is gathered in groups in a house owned or reated by some one woman; and another class who are distributed as units in single rooms. Now, anyone who is at all observant must be aware that the majority of women who follow prostitution as a means of limiting in made to of these who are found. velihood is made up of those who are found in apartments by themselves; and, hence, if it be the case that there are twelve hundred who are in what are termed begnios, the entire number of professional prostitutes in the city is more than double this figure—or, some twenty-four hundred—and which will reduce the ratio to at least one of these women to thirty or thirty-five of our adult population of the stronger sex. But even this total of twenty-four hundred does not by any means include all those women in Chicago who are defiled by connection or contact with the profession of courtesanship. Be-tween the creatures who live in bagnios and those who, singly or in pars, occupy apartments, and the virtuous element, there is a broad territory which is thronged with another class, who are harlots in everywith another class, who are hariots in every-thing except the name, and the open prac-tice of the profession of courtesanship. This class is made up of women from every grade of society, and who resort to prostitution from pleasure of an almost inconceivable number of motives. There are sewing girls, clerks, servants, and others of this grade, who have an occupation and with whom harclerks, servants, and others of this grade, who have an occupation and with whom hariotry is episodic; and who resort to it, in the main, to add to their elender earnings. They live at home, as a rule, or in reputable board inghouses; but they have an arrangement with some proprietress of an assignation-house, and are sent for when they are wanted. Above this class in social standing, but infinitely below it in morals, is another

One woman who is carrying on the trade of a harlot in secret will do more harm to society in one week than an open courtesan will in months. The courtesan who occupies an ap-

The motives of this class in resorting to prostitution are, of th's class in resorting to proefitution are, in some cases, the outgrowth of vanity; in others, of a desire to make more money than they receive from their legitimate earnings. It is, for instance, a well-known fact that a woman who has lately been before the public in a most unenviable role, was in the habit, although receiving a comfortable support from her husband, of borrowing considerable sums from her gentlemen friends, and of doing it in a way that forced the conclusion that she was willing, not to repay the loan in kind, but in such favors as can be accorded by a woman to a man. In endeavoring to arrive at a conclusion as to the extent of prostitution in Chicago, there should be estimated not merely those abandoned women who occupy bagnios, but all those women

The latter are just as much prostitutes as the women who have no concealment of their profession; and they are thrice as degraded and vastly more dangerous and demoralizing to society. general in this section. The first and second wards were speedily under water, and dwelling-bouses and all kinds of property were endangered. The fire dep riment worked beroically in rescuing property and saving life. The railroad track of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern was soon three feet under water for a distance of five hundred feet. The water was nine inches deep on the floor of the Congregational church, and three feet deep on the operahouse floor. The water subsided nearly as suddenly as it came. Two boys, Fred Sieberting and Y. Merwin, and a girl, name unknown, were drowned. The damage to city property will reach twenty-five thousand dellars. Reports from neighboring villages state that they also sustained damage on account of the wet weather and floods. Some of the data referred to above are already approximately known. It is known, for instance, that not less that seventy-five per cent. of the professional courtesans in Chicago are furnished by a single nationality; and that among that class who may be termed secret harlots, scarcely one per cent. is supplied by the nationality just referred to. It is also tolerably well known that the causes which lead women to this life of shame are very far from being, in a majority of cases, of a sentimental character—as is so often alleged—but are no higher than any other transaction in which money is given in exchange for some commodity. In nine cases out of ten, or in ninety-nine of each hundred, women go into prostitution for the sole rea-

The vast majority of them are ignorant, and unlettered to an almost inconceivable degree—a fact which goes far to prove that the cause of their downfall has no connection with a refined nature or cultivated, sensitive faculties. The evil which prostitution inflicts on society is beyond computation; and yet it must be conceded that the burden of the evil does not originate with those who openly practice the profession. The greatest harm comes from those who are secret members of the nefarious guild. When the character of a disease is known, when its symptoms are medical association:

NEW YORK, July 12.—The Orangemen are observing the twelfth of July by an excursion up Hudson river. There is a general flutter of Orange ribbone, and the bands on the steamer and barges are playing Boyne Water, Croppies Lie Down, Protestant Boys and such party tunes.

MONTREAD, July 12.—The anniversary of the battle of Boyne is passing over quietly. The Orangemen are confining the celebration to their lodge-room, and in the evening they will dine together. The Catholic Union society met in their lodge-rooms thus morning, but, finding there would be no outside demonstration, dispersed. Mosers, Weeks & Potters: Gentlemen.—Since July last I have been using your Cuticura for Scald Head, and it has cured me when all medicines that I have taken for nine years did me no good. I am now using it as a hair dressing, but my head is well. It keeps the hair in very nice condition.

THE FROZEN ZONE.

An Arrival from Canalaska Reports the Progress of the Cutter Corwin.

Messrs. Weeks & Potters: Gentlemen.—For the last twenty years I have been troubled about as bad as any one I ever saw with Dandruff. My scalp was completely covered with scales, sometimes nearly a quarter of an inch in size. I considered it incurable. About two months since I purchased Cuticura and Cuticura Soap, and in about two weeks after commencing to use them, I found the Dandruff entirely gone. My scalp is now as free from it and as healthy as it could possibly be. I feel it my duty to both you and the public to state the above facts.

Yours respectfully,

THOMAS LEE,
Sewing Machine Dealer. San Francisco, July 12.—A Port Townsend dispatch says: "The bark Henry Buck, fifteen days from Ounalaska, arrived here today with the revenue cutter Corwin's mail. The Corwin left Ounalaska June Sth, after taking seventy tons of coal from the Henry Buck. She was well furnished with provisions from the Alaska commercial company. Everybody on board is well and quite sangune in the ultimate success of the expedition. The Corwin was bound first for St. Bules Island, thence to Michalofsky, to await a chance to enter Behring Straits, as the steamer St. Paul reported that the nee was not yet open, and the winter had been very mild with the late spring."
